

Resolution of sales tax lawsuit.

Jody Siegle, Executive Director, Monroe County School Boards Association

Jody Siegle

On Tuesday, September 9th, the Monroe County Legislature passed a plan to repay Monroe County's school districts the sales tax revenues that were diverted from the schools as part of the County's F.A.I.R. plan enacted 50 weeks earlier. The settlement agreement provides that the County will:

- * Resume the normal payment of the shared sales tax revenues beginning with the County's new fiscal year in January 2009;
- * Repay over five years, beginning in January 2010, all the money withheld from the schools during 2008 plus interest;
- * Pay the legal fees the schools generated during this legal dispute.

Recognizing the significance of the Appellate Court's 5-0 ruling in favor of the school districts' position that the law creating the Medicaid Intercept did not change the County's continuing obligations to comply with their tax sharing agreements, the County approached the schools in a desire to resolve this situation.

Understanding the fiscal problems that would ensue for the County if the County were forced to immediately refund the $29 million that had been withheld and used in other ways, the school districts agreed to a plan that would enable the County to budget to pay back the money. As residents of the County too, the school negotiators sought a solution that would work well for all the parties.

Now all that remains is for each of the 24 districts involved in the lawsuit against the County to approve the settlement agreement. It is anticipated that those votes will take place at school board meetings in September and October.

One other outcome of this dispute is the County government has learned a great deal about the schools they did not know before. County leaders have gained a new understanding of how schools budget and the role of mandates in determining school spending. Maggie Brooks, the County Executive, has committed to partnering with the schools in the future as we all work to solve the fiscal issues facing our community.

Monroe County Education Coalition

Working Together To Support Public Education

September 2008

MCEC helps you as you help students learn.

Your Monroe County Education Coalition is here to support your good efforts.

The Monroe County Education Coalition (MCEC) works to –

- * Increase community support for our excellent local public schools
- * Increase awareness of issues that affect children's ability to learn
- * Seek state funding to support public education and education reforms
- * Secure a continued fair share of Monroe County sales tax revenues for school districts.

Your MCEC:

- * Publishes an electronic newsletter regularly on current issues. Access newsletters at http://www.mcsba.org/mcec/news_issues.htm.
- * Develops POSITION STATEMENTS on important issues such as expensive mandates, state aid, and sales tax distribution. Access position statements at <http://www.mcsba.org/mcec/index.htm>.
- * Seeks meetings, as appropriate, with leaders of other governmental entities to present our recommendations in support of public education.

How can MCEC better help you?
